After 17 years of struggle involving "gangsters", broken promises and multiple trips to court, 24 families from the Ladang Bangi estate today finally signed the Sales and Purchase Agreements (SPA) for their new houses.

"We get a free house! Just now we went to look at it, it is beautiful," said the estate's Ex-Workers Committee chairman C Krishnan at the SPA signing ceremony in Kajang today.

Developer Trans Loyal Development Sdn Bhd will provide each family with a 870 sq ft apartment unit, complete with cabinet and air conditioning units, for no cost, and pay a rental compensation of RM625 for any house they move in, until the units are completed in 2020.

The developer has also promised to provide land nearby their new place to build a temple.

In return, the families will have to vacate the houses they are currently in It's sad that estate workers who were once the economic backbone of the country are now being treated with contempt. Some are even denied citizenship despite being born to second or third generations here.

“So we had no choice, we asked our guys (to go there). Maybe there were a little rough,” Chia admitted.

Maybe???

Maybe you hired gangsters.

Maybe your company is run by gangsters.

PART 2/2 Maybe it is high time the Selangor Government look into this issue and find a permanent solution to end this kind of poverty and displacement of the original citizens of the state.

PART 1/2 You can find displaced estate workers everywhere and new housing estates coming up with no recompense for estate workers. After some time, they will be pushed out altogether by developers and sometimes, racist citizens and end up in slums in the city. And the people coming into the state of

Selangor from other states
'suddenly' find
these people a nuisance. Like as if they dont
deserve to live
amongst them.
Fine examples
are Shah Alam,
sorry to sound
racist but which has fast become
